

Orlando Boy Wins Prize On Racer

Florida's Soap Box Derby champion, Ralph Schnur of Orlando, didn't win the International Derby Championship yesterday, but he did cop one of the major prizes—: a trophy for having the best up-holstered racer among the 130 entered in the event.

The 15-year-old youth was presented his award at the banquet for champions last night in Akron, where the championships were run. Earlier he was presented with a watch by W. E. Holler, Chevrolet Company general sales manager and father of Roger W. Holler of Orlando.

Racing before a crowd of nearly 50,000, young Schnur placed third in heat 12, making excellent time for a first-time entrant. Thomas Fisher of Detroit was the champion, and gets a college education scholarship. He flashed over the 1031 foot course in 26.68 seconds in his gravity racer.

The Holler Chevrolet Company, the Orlando Sentinel-Star and the American Legion sponsored the derby here at which Schnur won the right to enter the championship competition.
